NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Dr Peter Roebuck is Lecturer in Economic History in The New University of Ulster, Coleraine. He is currently working on an economic history of the Yorkshire baronetage, 1640-1760, and a study of landownership, agriculture, and economic developments in Ulster in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

Dr Yelling is Lecturer in Geography at Birkbeck College, London, and he is particularly interested in distinctions between common fields and enclosures. Some of his earlier work has already appeared in the REVIEW.

Michael Turner is at present Research Fellow in the Department of History at Reading, and is editing the unpublished manuscripts of the late W. E. Tate. He is completing a Ph.D. thesis on the social consequences and economic cost of Parliamentary enclosure in Buckinghamshire.

Keith Sutton is Lecturer in Geography at the University of Manchester, and is working on regional patterns of land-use change and land reclamation in France during the nineteenth century.

Dr Alan Baker is a university lecturer in Historical Geography and a Fellow of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. His current research interests are in the spatial processes of agricultural change, particularly in south-eastern England during the middle ages, and in the Paris Basin during the nineteenth century.
