Notes on Contributors

DR J BIELEMAN is a member of staff of the Department of Rural History of the Agricultural University at Wageningen in the Netherlands. Since 1979 he has been doing research on the agricultural history of the province of Drenthe from 1600 onwards. Besides his work on his thesis, which is yet to be completed, he has recently published two chapters on the subject in a handbook on the history of Drenthe, edited by J Heringa, Geschiedenis van Drenthe (Meppel, 1985).

DR W THWAITES completed her doctorate at Birmingham University in 1980 on 'The Marketing of Agricultural Produce in Eighteenth-Century Oxfordshire'. She is currently living at Greetham, Oakham, Leicestershire, and working on talks on famine and the third world.

DR CHARLES W J WITHERS is a lecturer in geography at the College of St Paul and St Mary, Cheltenham. He is currently working on a book about the cultural transformation of the Scottish Highlands, and on the agricultural manuscripts of James Hutton. His publications include Gaelic in Scotland 1698 to 1981: the geographical history of a language (Edinburgh, 1984), and numerous articles on the historical geography of Scotland. In 1986, as a research fellow in Edinburgh University's project on the Scottish Enlightenment, he is to research the social and scientific context to the development of eighteenth-century agriculture in Scotland.

DR J E ARCHER read history and politics at Swansea University, and received his PhD from the University of East Anglia in 1982. He has been a lecturer in modern history at Edge Hill College of Higher Education, Ormskirk, Lancashire, since 1979. His thesis was on rural protest in East Anglia, 1830-70, and recent funding from the British Academy has enabled him to extend his research to include the period 1815-30. He is currently working on a book which will concentrate on acts of covert individual forms of protest, especially rural incendiarism.

DR P K HALL is a Senior Lecturer in Economic History at the University of Sydney. His interests include agriculture and economic development in Japan, Mexico, and mainland Tanzania during the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Among his recent publications are: 'Avance del transnacionalismo japonés y América Latina', Foro Internacional (Mexico) XXIII, 3 (Enero-Marzo 1983); and 'Japan's Farm Sector, 1920-40: a Need for Reassessment', Agricultural History, LVIII, 4 (1984).

DR TIM ROTH is a Senior Lecturer in Economic History at Portsmouth Polytechnic, where he has been teaching since 1967. His main research work has been on British commercial policy in the 1930s, focusing particularly on relations with overseas primary producers, and he has published a number of articles in this area. Currently he is working on a study of the adoption of protection by the United Kingdom in 1931/2.
