

Notes on Contributors

FREDRIK BERGENFELDT is a PhD student in Economic History at Lund University. His main research interest lies in economic geography and agricultural transformation. He is currently writing a monograph on the role of road transport costs in the agricultural transformation in southern Sweden, 1750–1850. Address: Department of Economic History, Lund University, Box 7083, 22007, Lund, Sweden; email: fredrik.bergenfeldt@ekh.lu.se.

PAUL BRASSLEY is Visiting Senior Research Fellow in the Centre for Rural Policy Research, University of Exeter; DAVID HARVEY is Associate Professor of Historical Cultural Geography, University of Exeter; MATT LOBLEY is Co-Director, Centre for Rural Policy Research, University of Exeter; MICHAEL WINTER is also Co-Director, Centre for Rural Policy Research, and Director of the Bath/Bristol/Exeter/Rothamsted Food Security and Land Research Alliance. Together they are currently engaged in a study of technical change in English agriculture 1935–1985. Address: Centre for Rural Policy Research, Department of Politics, University of Exeter, Amory building, Rennes Drive, Exeter EX4 4RJ; email: p.brassley@exeter.ac.uk.

HEATHER FALVEY gained her PhD from the University of Warwick in 2007 and was subsequently the post-doctoral researcher on two academic projects, one at Warwick and the other at the University of Cambridge. She teaches for the Continuing Education departments of Cambridge and Oxford and is the Editorial Assistant for the Economic History Review. Her main research interests are early modern communities and social unrest but she has recently edited a large collection of late eighteenth-century recipes and has now begun work on an edition of the correspondence of Humphry Repton held in the Huntington Library, California. email: falvey.ehr@btinternet.com.

LUC HENS is Associate Professor of Economics at Vesalius College and at the Department of Applied Economics, Vrije Universiteit Brussel. His research deals with international economics and development. Recent work (with Sofie Van den waeyenberg) investigated the scope for markets for the poor in developing countries ('Overcoming institutional distance: Expansion to base-of-the-pyramid markets', Journal of Business Research, 65, 2012; and 'Crossing the bridge to poverty, with low-cost cars', Journal of Consumer Marketing, 25, 2008). Address: Vrije Universiteit Brussel, Department of Applied Economics. Pleinlaan 2, B-1050 Brussel, Belgium; email: luc.hens.econ@vub.ac.be.

DAVID HOWELL is Emeritus Professor of History at Swansea University. His research and publications have been mainly in the field of Welsh agricultural and rural history from the seventeenth to the twentieth century. Born and raised in Pembrokeshire, he is currently editing its County History Atlas and is a vice president of the Pembrokeshire Historical Society. email: d.w.howell@swansea.ac.uk.

MATS OLSSON is a professor in Economic History at Lund University. His research interests lie in the agricultural production, rural transformation, and the role of the manors and the peasantries. He has written a number of articles devoted to these issues, edited several anthologies, and written monographs on the development of manorial demesne production and on taxes on agriculture. Address: Department of Economic History, Lund University, Box 7083, 22007 Lund, Sweden; email: mats.olsson@ekh.lu.se.

MAUREEN PERRIE is Emeritus Professor of Russian History in the Centre for Russian and East European Studies, University of Birmingham, and has published extensively on Russian history from the sixteenth to the twentieth centuries (some of her early work was on the peasantry in the revolutions of 1905 and 1917). In retirement, as well as working on seventeenth-century Muscovy, she has developed an interest in the history of Highbury Park, which is a few minutes' walk from her home. email: m.p.perrie@bham.ac.uk.

TIM WALES is a Research Associate on 'The Writings and Speeches of Oliver Cromwell: A New Critical Edition', a project based at the University of Cambridge. He has worked extensively in the social history of early Modern England, and in particular the administrative development and social relations of poor relief. He has also produced a directory of Parliamentary army officers for the Cromwell Association, to be published on British History Online this year. Address: Faculty of History, University of Cambridge, West Road, Cambridge, CB3 9E; email: tcw44@cam.ac.uk.

PETER M. SOLAR is Professor of Economics at Vesalius College, Vrije Universiteit Brussel and at Universite Saint-Louis-Bruxelles. He has worked and continues to work on Irish agricultural history as well as on the histories of the cotton and linen industries in Europe. Among other contributions he has put together long series of agricultural prices for Ireland (with Liam Kennedy, Irish Agriculture: A Price History [Dublin, 2007]) and for London (with Jan Tore Klovland, 'London Agricultural Prices, 1770–1913', Economic History Review, 64, 2011). Address: Vesalius College, Vrije Universiteit Brussel, Pleinlaan 2, B-1050 Brussel, Belgium; email: psolar@vub.ac.be.

PATRICK SVENSSON is an associate professor in Economic History at Lund University. His main research agenda includes the Swedish agricultural revolution and its social and economic consequences. He is also engaged in comparative research on this topic, historically within Europe and across time and space in a global history perspective. Svensson has published a number of articles in peer-review international journals and has edited two anthologies on these subjects. Address: Department of Economic History, Lund University, Box 7083, 22007 Lund, Sweden; email: patrick.svensson@ekh.lu.se.