

Notes on contributors

BRETT M. BENNETT is Lecturer in Modern History in the School of Humanities and Communication Arts at the University of Western Sydney and Honorary Research Associate in the Department of History at the University of Cape Town. He is currently completing three book-length manuscripts focused, respectively, on the world's forests, climate change, and conflicts over exotic tree planting in South Africa. Funding for this research came from a Social Science Research Council (SSRC) International Dissertation Research Fellowship (IDRF) in 2009–2010 and a National Science Foundation (NSF) Dissertation Improvement Grant in 2009. Email: B.Bennett@uws.edu.au.

CHRISTOPHER DYER is Emeritus Professor of History at the University of Leicester, and is also Senior Research Fellow in History in the University of Birmingham, and Honorary Senior Research Fellow in the Institute of Historical Research (University of London). His most recent book, A Country Merchant, 1495–1520, appeared in 2012, and he is now working on a book on medieval peasant farming. His current archaeological work includes a study of a medieval town which failed to grow, at Bretford in Warwickshire, and various deserted villages in the same county. He serves on the executive committee and editorial advisory board of the British Agricultural History Society, and is President of the Worcestershire Historical Society.

DAVID HEY is Emeritus Professor of Local and Family History at the University of Sheffield and a past president of the British Agricultural History Society. His latest book is A History of the Peak District Moors (Pen & Sword Books, 2014). Address: 12 Ashford Road, Dronfield Woodhouse, Dronfield, s18 8RQ; email: davidgeorgehey@gmail.com.

JESPER LARSSON is an assistant professor in Agrarian History at the Swedish University of Agricultural Sciences and affiliated faculty at The Vincent and Elinor Ostrom Workshop in Political Theory and Policy Analysis at Indiana University, USA. His research focuses on collective action within agriculture practice in early modern Scandinavia. His research interests include animal husbandry, especially transhumance systems and the evolution of agriculture systems. Address: Department of Economics, Swedish University of Agricultural Sciences, Box 7013, 750 07 Uppsala, Sweden; email: jesper.larsson@slu.se

DONALD L. OPITZ is Associate Professor in the School for New Learning at DePaul University, Chicago, USA. His research focuses on the history of women, gender and science. He is co-editor of For Better or For Worse? Collaborative Couples in the Sciences (2012). He is currently engaged in research on the international movement promoting the advancement of women in farming and gardening in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Address: School for New Learning, DePaul University, 1 E. Jackson Blvd., Chicago, IL 60604, USA; email: dopitz@depaul.edu.

THOMAS M. SMITH is a retired marketing executive. He received his MA in 2007 and his PhD in 2012 from the University of Nottingham. His doctoral thesis, entitled 'Enclosure and agricultural improvement in north-west Lincolnshire from c.1600 to 1850', provides the basis for the current article. He is interested in the use of Chancery decrees to validate enclosure agreements, the land tax, and other aspects of rural history in north Lincolnshire. Email: diplomate1@hotmail.com.

PAUL WARDE is Reader in Environmental and Economic History at the University of East Anglia. His interests focus in particular upon the use of wood as a fundamental resource in pre-industrial society; the long-term history of energy use and its relationship with economic development, and environmental and social change; the development of institutions for regulating resources and welfare support; and the history of environmental and economic thought. Recent publications include Power to the People. Energy in Europe over the last five centuries (2013), written with Astrid Kander and Paolo Malanima, and The Future of Nature. Documents of Global Change (2013), edited with Libby Robin and Sverker Sörlin. Address: School of History, University of East Anglia, Norwich, NR4 7TJ; email: P.Warde@uea.ac.uk.

TOM WILLIAMSON is Professor of Landscape History at the University of East Anglia and has written widely on agricultural history, landscape archaeology, and the history of landscape design. His recent publications include An Environmental History of Wildlife in England, 1650–1950 (2013) and Environment, Society and Landscape in Early Medieval England: time and topography (2012). Address: School of History, University of East Anglia, Norwich, NR4 7TJ; email: T.Williamson@uea.ac.uk.