

New release from University of Hertfordshire Press

This detailed and original study of early-modern agrarian society in the Somerset Levels examines the small landholders in a group of sixteen contiguous parishes in the area known as Brent Marsh. These were farmers with lifehold tenures and a mixed agricultural production whose activities and outlook are shown to be very different from that of the small 'peasant' farmers of so many general histories.

"This is a substantial, innovative and thought-provoking contribution to the history of agrarian development, regional history and the lives and choices of ordinary people in a decisive and tumultuous period of England's past."

Professor Henry French, University of Exeter

Find the ebook
in Kindle, ePub
& PDF editions
at most major online retailers

The World of the Small Farmer Tenure, profit and politics in the early modern Somerset Levels by Patricia Croot

UH Press, Vol. 15, Studies in Regional and Local History

ISBN 978-1-909291-86-7, hardback, 240pp, May 2017, £35.00 / US$79.95

ISBN 978-1-909291-87-4, paperback, 240pp, Sep 2017, £18.99 / US$37.95

Available to buy through your local bookshop or via our online store

www.UHPress.co.uk

University of Hertfordshire UH Press

To members of the British Agricultural History Society

SPECIAL DISCOUNT OFFER: SAVE £25 per volume
ORDER ONLINE AT MORE THAN 35% DISCOUNT
Available 30 June 2017 – Offer ends 30 September 2017

To order go to www.eerpublishing.com
Add promotion code FMLT2017 to your shopping basket.
This offer is made to individuals. It is not available to institutions.

English Landed Society Revisited
The Collected Papers of F.M.L. Thompson

In two volumes. Introduction Professor W.D. Rubinstein
Vol. 1 ISBN 9781911204633 Hardback £65.00. OFFER PRICE £40.00.
Vol. 2 ISBN 9781911204657 Hardback £65.00. OFFER PRICE £40.00.

“He is a very important historian and this is an important and very welcome collection.” – Professor Lord Asa Briggs.

This two-volume set brings together the essential and extensive publications by Professor Thompson otherwise scattered in many journals. These pieces form a major supplement to his classic book – English Landed Society.

Volume 1: Contents: ‘Victorian England: the horse-drawn society’. Inaugural lecture as Professor of Modern History, Bedford College, 1970; ‘The end of a great estate’, Economic History Review, 2nd ser. 8 (1955); ‘The land market in the nineteenth century’, Oxford Economic Review, new ser. 9 (1957); ‘English landownership: The Ailesbury Trust, 1832–56’, Economic History Review, 2nd ser. 11 (1958); ‘English Great Estates in the 19th Century, 1790–1914’, First International Conference of Economic Historians, Stockholm, 1960; ‘Land and Politics in England in the nineteenth century’, Transactions of the Royal Historical Society, 5th ser. 15 (1965); ‘The social distribution of landed property in England since the sixteenth century’, Economic History Review, 2nd ser. 19 (1966); ‘The Second Agricultural Revolution, 1815–1880’, Economic History Review, 2nd ser. 21 (1968); ‘Landownership and economic growth in England in the eighteenth century’, from E.L. Jones and S.J. Woolf (eds), Agrarian change and economic development: the historical problems (1969); ‘Nineteenth-century horse sense’, Economic History Review, 2nd ser. 29 (1976); ‘Social control in Victorian England’, Economic History Review, 2nd ser. 34 (1981); ‘Horses and hay in Britain, 1830–1918’, from F.M.L. Thompson (ed.), Horses in European economic history: a preliminary canter (British Agricultural History Society, 1983); ‘English landed society in the nineteenth century’, from Pat Thane, Geoffrey Crossick and Roderick Flood (eds), The power of the past: essays for Eric Hobsbawm (Cambridge, Cambridge University Press, 1984); ‘Aristocracy, gentry, and the middle classes in Britain, 1750–1850’, from Adolf M. Birke and Lothar Kettenacker (eds), Bürgertum, Adel und Monarchie (Middle classes, aristocracy, and monarchy) (Munich, 1989).

Volume 2: Contents: ‘Rural society and agricultural change in nineteenth-century Britain’, from George Grantham and Carol S. Leonard (eds), Agrarian organisation in the century of industrialisation: Europe, Russia, and North America (Greenwich, Conn., JAI Press, 1989); ‘Life after death: how successful nineteenth-century businessmen disposed of their fortunes’, Economic History Review, 2nd ser. 43 (1990); ‘English landed society in the twentieth century, 1, Property: collapse and survival’ (Presidential address), Transactions of the Royal Historical Society, 5th ser. 40 (1990); ‘English landed society in the twentieth century, 2, New poor and new rich’, Transactions of the Royal Historical Society, 6th ser. 1 (1991); ‘English landed society in the twentieth century, 3, Self help and outdoor relief’, Transactions of the Royal Historical Society, 6th ser. 2 (1992); ‘English landed society in the twentieth century, 4, Prestige without power?’, Transactions of the Royal Historical Society, 6th ser. 3 (1993); ‘Desirable properties: the town and country connection in British society since the late eighteenth century’, Historical Research 64 (1991); ‘Stitching it together again’ (Reply to W.D. Rubinstein), Economic History Review, 2nd ser. 45 (1992); ‘Changing Perceptions of Land Tenure in Britain, 1750–1914’, from Donald Winch and Patrick K. O’Brien (eds), The Political Economy of British Historical Experience, 1688–1914 (Oxford, Oxford University Press, 2002); ‘Moving frontiers and the Fortunes of the Aristocratic Town, 1830–1930’, London Journal 2.1 (1995); ‘The Land market, 1880–1925: A reappraisal reappraised’, Agricultural History Review 55.2 (2007); ‘The Strange Death of the English Land question’, from Matthew Cragoe and Paul Readman (eds), The Land Question in Britain, 1750–1950 (Houndsmill, Palgrave, 2010).